A small sample of benefits of Liferay video delivery server For more information on the benefit of a video delivery server on your Liferay portal check out the blog post below: How video delivery works is that you upload a video into Liferay video delivery and set the size of the pieces you'd like for the players. We call that the "Track Id" "UnderId" and "Player Id" below are the three parts of this. For the player, the video is fragmented into 10 pieces of 1 second each with a 5 second delay between the pieces. So you would have 10 seconds of video 10 times in order for 1 full video. You can specify how many parts should be and what should happen when an underid meets an overid. So if you choose 2, then it means it will be split into 2, and the pieces will have a 0.5 second difference. Below are some example of what this is: Player - 1.1.2.3.4 Track Id - 1 UnderId - 1.1.2 So if you put 1.1.2.3.4 into a player, the video will play for 10 seconds and it will then split the video into 4 pieces with a 0.5 second difference between each one. So you get: 1.1.2.3.4 - Track 1 1.1.2.3.4 - Track 2 1.1.2.3.4 - Track 3 1.1.2.3.4 - Track 4 If you want to edit the video before upload, you can download the video using the downloader that is part of the video delivery server. You can also make multiple videos if you place the video into multiple video delivery servers. The videos can even be of different formats. Like I said the video can even be from different providers. Let's look at how the video delivery works. The video provider sends the video to a track id. What is a track id and an underid? A track id is the id of the video that is stored on the Video Delivery Server. An underid is another piece of the same video that are on different track ids. So if a video plays 10 times on the video delivery server then it is in a specific order. This order is stored in the underids. So in the example before,
